

Biography:

Ji-Guang WANG,

MD, PhD, FAHA, FESC

Professor of Cardiovascular Medicine

Shanghai Jiaotong University School of Medicine

Ji-Guang Wang is director of the Shanghai Institute of Hypertension, and director of the Department of Hypertension, Ruijin Hospital.

At present, he is coordinating several multicentre randomized clinical trials and population- and patient-cohort studies in China. He has published 492 full-length articles on hypertension in the international literature and 173 articles in the Chinese literature, and has lectured extensively in international and China national conferences.

He is a former Executive Council Member of the International Society of Hypertension, immediate past president of the Asian-Pacific Society of Hypertension, immediate past president of the Pulse of Asia Society, current deputy president of the HOPE Asia Network, and current president of the Chinese Hypertension League.

He serves on the editorial board of several international and China national journals in the field of hypertension and cardiovascular medicine as Editor-in-Chief, Associate Editor, Section Editor or Member.